

Liane Wardlow, PhD, Senior Director, Clinical Research & Telehealth, West Health

Liane Wardlow, PhD, is Senior Director of Clinical Research at West Health Institute, a nonprofit research organization. She leads a portfolio of national collaborations focused on developing and scaling care models that improve clinical outcomes and reduce costs, including the Northwestern Medicine–West Health Accelerator, a health system transformation initiative spanning 80+ clinics. She also leads West Health's strategic partnership with the National Committee for Quality Assurance (NCQA) to advance behavioral health integration into primary care through a core set of national quality measures. Dr. Wardlow's research focuses on scalable integrated behavioral health, advance care planning, and home-based palliative care, with emphasis on vulnerable populations including PACE. She holds a PhD and MS in Experimental Psychology from UC San Diego and an MS from the University of Southern California.
